Athens Video Art Festival is an International Festival of Digital Arts and New Media held annually in Athens, Greece. Since 2005 the Festival has been attended by over 100.000 visitors and has attracted more than 8.500 artists from 58 countries to submit 14.500 works.

In Athens Video Art Festival are being presented different types of artistic expressions and mediums. Video art is an art form with communicative, educational and entertainment characteristics.

Beyond the common optical frames of communication and functionality, such as the depictions on television, on computer or the physical windows, video art assumes the role to reflect on the trends of modern times. Issues related to collectivism, consumerism, homogeneity of everyday life, human development, communication and perception are formed depictions in response to our present, and committed reviews of the past and statements for the future.

Abstracted forms constructed either with digital mediums or through fragments and close up of physical states, personal and collective narratives which are milestones for modern society and additional subjective considerations for the present are formed this year's video art programme.

Frames and sounds travel around the globe, contributing to spatiotemporal compositions of modern society with the aim of representation and description.
